

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO PRESS
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

March 11, 1907.

Prof. I. Goldziher,
Budapest, Hungary.

Dear Sir:

We wrote to you about a month ago regarding Professor James R. Jewett's edition of the Mir'at az-Zaman (A. H. 495-654), a fac-simile of the manuscript in Yale University. You will remember that we offered it at a special price of $15.00 to subscribers whose orders were mailed before April first, and solicited your aid in having it placed in the library of your university. As the date of publication is drawing near, and the price must soon be advanced to $20.00, we venture to bring the matter once more to your attention.

We spoke in our previous letter of the importance of the volume for students of Semitics and its high character both as regards scholarship and in the matter of material form. We are sure that you will wish to encourage work of this sort and believe that you cannot do so more effectively than by lending your support to this publication. Even though it may not be immediately needed in connection with your work, it is a book that will always be a valued possession of your library and should be secured at once under the favorable terms now offered.

May we not hope that you will recommend it to your librarian for purchase?

Very respectfully,

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO PRESS

Newman Miller

Director.